DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities:

Texts are missing as a result of holes on top of the page (particularly in the claims).

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stein et al. (US 5,712,866) (hereinafter Stein).

Regarding claim 1, Stein teaches the following claimed subject matter.

"a continuously variable slope delta demodulator (CVSD) ... analog signal"

"a continuously ... digital data stream" (Figure 5; Col. 5, lines 29-63).

Stein teaches the use of CVSD in both the transmitter (i.e. in the encoder 16) and the receiver for encoding and decoding the signal. The signal after leaving the transmitter is in analog form. The signal in the receiver before being converting to, i.e. audio signal, is in digital form.

Stein differs from the claimed invention in that it doesn't teach "a first microcontroller ... digital data stream" and "a second microcontroller ... initial digital data stream". However, these claimed subject matter would have been obvious to one skilled in the art as optional. That is, information signal (either in analog or digital form, and if the signal is in digital form, no digitizing and quantizing are needed) is to be formatted, encoded, scrambled, modulated ... etc. appropriately depending on each particular design and application. The final signal is then transmitted to the receiver over a communication channel. At the receiver, the reverse and corresponding process (of that in the transmitter) is performed to convert the signal back to its original form.

Regarding claim 2, see claim 1 above.

Regarding claim 3, the claimed subject matter "wherein ... receiver/transmitter" would have been design specific to one skilled in the art.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Law (US 6,064,699) discloses a Wireless Speaker System For Transmitting Analog And Digital Information Over A Single High-Frequency Channel.

Van den Heuvel et al. (US 4,860,312) disclose a Quality Improvement For A Digitally Transmitted Information Signal.
